Class Description

What issues is contemporary drama addressing? Are these the issues it should be addressing? Who is it addressing? What is its audience in the second decade of the 21st century? What are its techniques? Through extracts from a number of English language plays, the course will look at how some 21st century Anglophone dramatists address major contemporary themes in their own highly particular way.

After completing the course, students will have had the opportunity to become familiar with a number of contemporary theatre practices and with several dramatists at the forefront of writing for the stage today.

Grading and Assessment
