Class Description

This course aims to provide an initial perspective on understanding the relationship humans have with visual experience through various media and artistic products. In particular, the course will focus on the as of yet under-examined representation and reception of women and girls in visual culture throughout history. For this reason, the materials examined will range from manifestos to visual poetry, photography, graphic novels, and even online memes and gaming\gamers that have subjects and creators socially read as women.

Grading and Assessment

Percentage assessment:

- 1) attendance and relevant participation (20%);
- 2) Intermediate test (40%);
- 3) final test or assignment (40%).
